Ball in Pacific Ocean

Clover Point. Victoria, BC

It was a cold -4 in Victoria today as I ventured down to the ocean to finish my tour. I had a little company as my brother-in-law and sister were on hand as well a reporter and her photographer to document the event

The water may have been cold but it was my head that felt the temperature. Thus I donned a toque (how appropriate) as I stepped into the chilling waters and dipped my balls. It was a grand adventure that took me across our great country and allowed me to partake in my favorite activity along the way. One hundred days of adventures, an experience I shall never forget. Thanks to all who I met along the way and the many people who helped me accomplish this tour. I hope everyone has a great Christmas and gets out to a bowling centre to celebrate the 100th birthday of 5-pin bowling Canada's greatest sport invention.
